

05/08/15 -- Somerville, MA -- ScrewyWorld Productions is proudly announcing its flagship production, Displaced, for you to download onto your computer machines and play over and over and over.

Have you ever wondered how you would fare if you were suddenly abducted from your home and forced to perform indefinitely for the entertainment of an alien civilization? Wonder no more! Displaced finally lets you try your hand at alien reality-TV challenges! The producers of the show have grabbed the wrong contestant with whom you just happen to share names, and you now find yourself trapped in this game until you and the other competitors finally beat every arena. The challenge is simple - make it to the goal portal at the end of each level.

You're probably thinking to yourself, "I think I would fare pretty well - I mean, how hard could it be?" You're wrong! How many gladiator challenges have you participated in - let alone won? Can you even touch your toes? The other two competitors in this challenge have done all of that - six times in the past four hours as a matter of fact. You're definitely outclassed. Oh, and the chemical composition of the alien planet's atmosphere leaves your skin reeeeeeally sticky - so try not to touch any loose objects sitting on the ground.

What you do have going for you, however, is that human spirit. You're not going to let a little thing like severe unathleticism, disparaging sarcastic remarks, and utter lack of faith in your abilities to move your blobby, sticky body keep you down, are you? You may not be the fastest or the strongest competitor, but you're far from useless (despite the opinions of the other two competitors). There is a reason you have accidentally been placed here and your competitors will soon see that weighting for you makes all the difference. Now go prove it to yourself, the other competitors, and the entire alien planet.

Displaced is a 2D platformer with a twist and can be played on just about any old computer, and is planned for release Summer, 2015.
